In a world of increasing global connectedness, learning about global issues has never been more important. This course is an analysis of cultural conflict in developing nations resulting from rapid and extensive technological and social change. This course examines how economic and cultural globalization relate to nationalist movements, war, and increasing instability and fragility of populations and nations. This course also satisfies GEC requirements (Individual and Groups; Global Studies (International Issues successors); Cross-Disciplinary Seminar)